PHOENIX IS BEST TEACHES LESSON

Charile Morton, the popular florist has not only returned to Phoenix, but has returned to stay, and is now associated with D. A. Doperio.

After having spent the past three or four months in his car traveling through various places of the Pacific coast, as far north as Scattle, at which place he always spent some time investigating and hunting for a prospective location in which to settle permanently, Mr. Morton finally came to the conclusion that the one place in the west for him was Phoenix. He returned to Phoenix several weeks ago, and entered negotiations with Dominick Donofrio, and finally the flower of some Christian home.

fore? How the price of an overcoat influenced a man down and gave him the inspiration to start up, and how a fallen woman added to that inspiration and influence, makes a wonderfully impressive picture story, in which Rhea Mitchell and William Stowel score an artistic triumph.

The story is koven around the following simple statement of facts. The man has been discharged from a prison where he has served his lime for some offerme. He is the son of tich and proud parents who never did else for him than be that. The woman, frankly a woman of the streets because she likes that life, comes in contact with the man on a cold wet night in a dance hall, where he is seeking sheller. He needs food, and an overcoat. She offers both, but he will not take her money. Henceyer he accompany to the interest of the indesirable husting about to be thrust upon her. The photography is excellent and the deller.
